Toddles toddled through his special cove of tender, sweet grass. As he skipped along he spotted his sister Chuckles. "Mother would like you to take these flowers to Grandmother." "Sure," he answered taking the gift.

As he hopped along the bumpy road, he heard a growling noise. "Is that my stomach?," he asked himself. No one answered. He stood on his hind legs to see if he could find any evidence of danger. As he looked around he spotted two sleek eyes peeking out of a bush. "Hello?," Toddles asked, shivering in his fur.

The eyes started to narrow. A big ugly nose poked itself out of the bush. "Help!" Toddles screamed as a huge creature sprang out.

He chased Toddles until he jumped behind a rock out of breath. As the monster crept closer Toddles wanted to see what it was but he was too scared. Cautiously he stuck his head from behind the rock, and there in front of him was a mouth open, drool dripping FOX!

Toddles was blocked! How would he get home? If he kept running he'd get caught! As the sly fox smiled nastily he pounced behind the rock only to find a message, which read: I'M SMARTER THAN YOU! "That rabbit!" the fox thought. He got away again! As the fox looked closer he noticed a hole in the ground. "Ooh!," exclaimed the fox, No your not!

He followed the scent until he found the little animal. "Please" begged Toddles, "don't eat me!" "Why shouldn't I" asked the fox? "Because" replied Toddles proudly, "I would like to stay alive!" "Ha" exclaimed the fox, "You think I'll pass on eating you for that?" "Yes" answered Toddles shyly. "Well" bellowed the fox, Think again!

He quickly sprang into action, chasing Toddles until he dizzily fell down. Toddles thought fast, rapping the fox up with vines until he looked like a huge yarn ball! "Help," Toddles heard as he proudly delivered the flowers to his grandmother. And hopped along the bumpy road to his special cove of tender, sweet grass!
