I would like to write and dedicate this article to Dewitt Grove “Witty”. I would like to express my concern about his old “dreds”. I feel as if that is what made him “Witty”. Then he cut his hair and it made me sad. I would also like to point out that his addiction to Clash of Clans. Witty, if you’re reading this, I would like to tell you, I am here to help with that. I’m a soon-to-be psychologist; we can work out your problems together.

Coming to Enterprise America has been an awesome experience so far today. I am so lucky to see up close the way things work and affect a city. Everyone working here is doing such a fantastic job and is very into what they are doing. I think that this will help kids decide what they want to do in the future and show kids what their parents and other adults do for a daily job, earning more respect for them. Everyone is smiling and enjoying what they are doing including myself.
